

The reviewer's guide

Everything you do as a reviewer — finding styles, reading your tasks, and approving or rejecting the documents that get sent to suppliers.

Written for non-technical users; no jargon.

Your role in 30 seconds

Your job is straightforward: check the documents on a style and decide — approve what's correct, reject what isn't. Here's the shape of it.

✓ What you do here

- + Browse every style and open its data
- + Work from My tasks (what's on you) and the Reviews queue (everything waiting)
- + Start a review so it's marked as yours
- + Approve a document that's print-ready
- + Reject a document with a note when something's wrong

How a style reaches you

The same journey happens for every style. You come in at steps 3–4.

- 1 Data syncs in from Monday — customer, order (PO), sizes, wash-care symbols and the rest land on the style automatically.
- 2 The documents are generated — care labels, carton prints, hangtags, stickers... whatever the style's spec calls for.
- 3 The finished documents arrive for review — they show up in the Reviews queue, and on your My tasks once you start one.
- 4 You check each document and Approve it or Reject it with a note. This is your part.
- 5 When every document is approved, the style publishes — the files go to the supplier and the status flows back to Monday automatically. Nothing leaves until then.

What's inside

1 Getting around

Your sidebar, the three places you'll live, and how to find your way around.

2 My tasks

Your personal to-do in four buckets — what's waiting on you, the X / Y progress, and how to pick up a review.

3 The Reviews queue

The shared list of everything awaiting review — and exactly how it differs from My tasks.

4 Finding a style

The Styles list: search, filters, the status and readiness columns, and how to open one.

5 Reviewing a style — the outputs

The Review screen: readiness, statuses, the document accordions, and Approve / Reject.

6 Reviewing a style — the data

The style's Details: care instructions, required fields, EAN barcodes & the PO PDF, and the Monday link.

The one thing to remember. The supplier only ever sees a fully-approved style. Every decision you make is tracked — approve what's right, reject what isn't and say why, and nothing incorrect can slip through to print.
